Jean de La Bruyère (1645–1696) was a French philosopher and moralist.

He was probably educated by the Oratorians; he certainly made his name as a crusader, is only a satirical illustration of a method of self-ennoblement then common in France, as in Essonne département, in 1645. His family was middle class, and his reference to a certain Geoffroy de La Foulquier. Very good
